In the 2014 January series, the WJEC marking scheme was designed to promote transparency and consistency across examiners, ensuring that all students are assessed fairly regardless of who marks their work.

Detailed Breakdown of the January 2014 U2 WJEC Marking Scheme

Core Principles of the Marking Scheme

The scheme is built on key principles:

- Criterion-Based Assessment: Marks are awarded based on how well students meet specific criteria.
- Level Descriptors: Performance levels range from basic to excellent, with clear descriptors.
- Consistency: Multiple examiners follow the same guidelines to ensure uniformity.
- Transparency: Students and teachers can understand how marks are awarded and what is expected.

Mark Allocation and Levels of Achievement

The marking scheme categorizes responses into different levels, typically:

- Level 1: Basic understanding, limited development, significant errors
- Level 2: Adequate understanding, some development, minor errors
- Level 3: Good understanding, well-developed responses, few errors
- Level 4: Excellent understanding, comprehensive responses, high accuracy

Each level corresponds to a specific mark range, with detailed descriptors guiding assessors.
