Craft Your Stories

Dress for Success

While company culture varies, dressing slightly more professionally than the everyday office attire is a safe bet. This shows respect for the interviewer's time and the opportunity itself.

If in doubt, don't hesitate to ask the recruiter about the dress code beforehand.

Asking Insightful Questions

Engage With the Interviewer

Sometimes, interviewers appreciate when candidates ask about their own experiences or insights into the company culture. This can foster rapport and make the conversation more memorable.

Handling Virtual and Panel Interviews

Managing different personalities and questions can be challenging, but staying composed and adaptable will help you shine.

Post-Interview Etiquette

Your interaction doesn't end when you leave the interview room. Following up appropriately can influence the hiring decision.
