The project's creators sought to craft a narrative that goes beyond surface-level reporting, delving into the psychological and emotional dimensions of those impacted by these challenges. The term "jaqueca," meaning migraine in Spanish, metaphorically represents the persistent and overwhelming nature of societal problems that weigh heavily on communities.

The project's multidisciplinary approach involved collaborations between journalists, filmmakers, psychologists, and activists, enabling a holistic exploration of its themes. The narrative structure is non-linear, reflecting the complexity of the issues discussed.
